As a part of the Irish program to

of English rule, the Lord Mayor of Dublin is reported to have discard-ed the ancien insignia of his office, including the chain which it has been customary for the lord mayor to wear around his neck on occa-sions of ceremony. This chain was a gift from King William III, to his chief magistrate of Dublin of the day. It was valued at the time of its presentation at $8,000, its worth having increased more than ten-fold since. To the chain is ap-pended a gold medal with the portrait of King William and Latin

Few persons are aware that the traditional heraldic color of Ireland is blue, not green. The green comes from the mixing of the national blue with the Ulster orange, just as the mixing of blue and yellow paint gives green. When the Ulster Orangemen joined the Irish Nationalists, calling themselves the United Irishmen, in 1798, they adopted the green flag as an em-blem of unity.
